

DEVON K. NUNNELEY

Devon joined Gilbert LLP as an associate in December 2009.

Devon's practice focuses on litigating complex civil cases and resolving insurance coverage issues for companies with potential mass tort liability. Examples of recent matters include:

- representing a post-bankruptcy trust in securing insurance coverage for asbestos-related liabilities
- representing a national non-profit organization with respect to recovery from insurers of amounts spent in the successful defense of the organization's public education campaign

Prior to joining Gilbert LLP, Devon was a litigator with White & Case LLP. In that capacity she represented domestic, foreign, and sovereign clients in federal court. Her experience includes defending clients in complex litigation involving the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act and act of state doctrine, as well as litigation related to alleged international cartel activity.

Devon has an active pro bono practice. She successfully litigated a landlord-tenant dispute in D.C. Superior Court, helped a transgender immigrant from El Salvador attain asylum in the United States, helped a domestic violence victim win full custody of her child, and was part of a team of attorneys that successfully represented a sexual harassment claimant in the District Court for the District of Columbia.

Noteworthy

In law school, Devon won the Hinton Moot Court Competition in brief writing and oral argument.
